How to play Chuck-a-Luck - The Basics

Chuck-a-Luck originated in the Wild West and was probably based on Sic Bo (Chinese craps).

What is the objective of the game?

Like Sic Bo, Chuck-a-Luck uses three dice. Players predict what will show face-up on the three dice after they have been tumbled.

There are four different ways of making bets and these are:

1. 'any number', When one die shows the value bet, the player wins even money (1-to-1). Two of the dice showing the number bet would mean that the player is paid double his bet (2-to-1) and when all three of the dice show the number bet, it would mean that the player wins triple his bet (3-to1). All bets placed on numbers not shown on the displayed dice are considered lost.
2. 'field'. A 'field' bet is betting that all dice will add up to one of the numbers featured on the field.
3. 'over 10' (dice total is over ten).
4. 'under 11'. (dice total is under 11).

Along with the Wheel-of-Fortune, Chuck-a-Luck is probably the simplest and easiest to grasp of all the games on offer.
